INTRODUCTION

This multidisciplinary online workshop will provide opportunities to experience creative practices that support the enhancement of the voices of older people with complex care needs in evidence building within health and social care. This workshop moves the focus to appreciating and utilising knowledge produced and expressed through senses and experiences, drawing from arts and social science approaches, and created and communicated through different creative media. The two half-day participative workshops will introduce, critically discuss, and provide opportunities to experience creative practices that support the enhancement of the voices of older people with complex care needs in evidence building within health and social care.

Organisers:

Prof Caroline Nicholson, School of Health Sciences,
University of Surrey

Dr Richard Green, School of Health Sciences,
